“Choose Europe” – European cities and regions join forces to drive investment leadership in sustainable growth and regional resilience

Collaboration, a human-centric approach, sustainability and quality of life are the shared values that have made the European Metropolitan Regions a driving force in tackling global challenges. This alternative approach has attracted the attention of foreign companies, investors and talent. The European Metropolitan regions are now launching a unique cooperation to safeguard the shared European economic value model and to support sustainable growth in their regions.

A group of European investment promotion agencies are taking their collaboration to a new level in the “Choose Europe” project. In a world facing polarities and adversities, the mission of the Choose Europe project is to position Europe as the ideal location for international companies looking to achieve economic success and sustainable growth.

The public agencies have chosen to join forces in the competitive field of attracting foreign direct investment, be it green field and relocation projects or talents, believing that shared success positively benefits the entire European region. Investment promotion agencies in several European cities and regions have been collaborating over the past years to improve their best practices and share a collective path for responsible development on the European continent. The network currently includes the metropolitan cities and regions of Amsterdam, Bavaria, Catalonia, Berlin, Copenhagen, Frankfurt, Helsinki, Lyon, Paris, Riga, Stockholm, Vienna, Warsaw and Zurich.

Emphasizing common values and differentiating specific assets to strengthen a prosperous European economic model is the objective of this informal group of European agencies that are committed to long-term cooperation. This collaboration has shared European values at its core: a human-centered model contributing to stability, sustainability and prosperity. It is the first time in the field of foreign direct investment (FDI) that competitors have joined forces for the greater good.

“We differ in geographic features and operate in different sectors, but ultimately we have a lot in common. Working at a metropolitan or regional level, we have been entrusted with the task of attracting sustainable investments to our cities, stimulating innovation and creating new jobs. Ultimately, these investments should benefit our local communities. With Choose Europe we take our collaboration to a next level working together on shared values without compromising on social and environmental sustainability” says Peter de Kruijk, Director of Amsterdam International Business, founding member of the network.

An extensive commitment to cooperation is shared by all agencies: “Often companies will have to choose between our regions, but we take comfort in the fact that the investment will settle with one of our neighbors sharing the same vision. This is part of our European spirit both in growth and resilience contexts. We feel that this sentiment, now more than ever, is a key argument to share with foreign investors and talents in the world” says Bertrand Foucher, General Director of Invest in Lyon.

The “Choose Europe” campaign will launch on 29th September in Helsinki, with representatives of the 14 cities, regions and metropolitan areas. The campaign will initially target North America and will focus on digital channels and several physical events taking place in European cities, such as Web Summit and MIPIM. This project marks the beginning of a long-term collaboration between the 14 cities, regions and metropolitan areas.
